

2013 Economic Outlook

Luncheon/Webcast of January 10, 2013 at Club Quarters

Abstract

- When will consumers have the confidence to spend again, and what does that mean for chemical and material companies?
- What can we expect from the economy and financial markets in 2013?
- What role will Shale Gas and other factors play in the US economy?

On Thursday, January 10, 2013, Martha Moore, Senior Director for Policy Analysis at the American Chemistry Council (ACC), will share her expert outlook for the major economic trends that will shape the future of the North American chemical industry. She has worked at the council for over 8 years and during her tenure has co-authored the ACC reports and outlooks with Kevin Swift, ACC's Chief Economist and Managing Director.

You are cordially invited to attend this important CM&E Luncheon and Live Webcast. In previous ACC presentations, CM&E members received an accurate, bird's-eye view of the evolving recovery from a deep credit crisis, especially the role of energy, manufacturing and housing. Nowadays, with the aftershocks of a European crisis that seems never to end, a sluggish recovery, the threat of the fiscal cliff, sharp election uncertainties and strong global headwinds ahead, we are looking forward to having an ACC spokesperson join us again in NYC to share updated views on what the chemicals industry can expect in 2013.

Biography

Martha Gilchrist Moore is senior director for policy analysis and economics at the American Chemistry Council. In that role, she analyzes the impact of various policy initiatives and energy trends on the chemical industry, in particular recent developments in shale gas. She also directs the Council's research on the direct and indirect economic contributions of the business of chemistry and the benefits to consumers.

Ms. Moore has worked on chemical industry issues for more than 15 years and is an authority on the market dynamics for the chemical industry and its end-use customer industries.

Ms. Moore holds a master's degree in economics from Indiana University and is a graduate of the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. She is a member of the National Association for Business Economics and the National Capital Area Chapter of the US Association for Energy Economics.
